Touching Tender Spots.

BY FARAWAY MOSES.

The human mind is formed a good deal like the human body. It sees to have a skin on it; a skin that is tough and calloused in some places and tender in other places. Sometimes, too, the epidermis seems to rub off, and when you touch these raw places on the average mind the owner just feels squalls.

I have likewise noticed that when a man has a bald spot on the top of his head, you can touch a hairless spot on his mind by poking fun at the surface bald spot. But some men's consciences, and consciousness, and entire mental apparatus have been put in training and have exercised so long and hard and ardently that there is a calloused sort of dry skin covering their whole mental machines, and you can't find a tender spot anywhere that will respond to the touch of the finger of scorn and shame. These men make good statesmen or judges of sweat shop industry, or Philadelphia politicians.

I was commenting on this idea in the shoe shop one day, and Looney Doffer said he thought men were growing worse every year. He said a long time ago men were pure and honest and virtuous and holy and consistent and noble and merciful and generous and charitable.

"When was dot periodical consummation?" remarked the cobbler, as he cut a hard piece of leather to trim it down to the proper shape and proportion of a half sole, and twisted his mouth to suit each angle of the knife as he laboriously followed the line. If a stranger could have seen his face through a window, ignorant of what he was doing with his hands, his first impression would have led him to believe the Dutchman was dying of a convulsive fit, superinduced through great mental strain or acute indigestion. "When was dot time when mens was strictly honest and merciful and holy accordingly?" he enquired again, as he stopped cutting a moment to rest his face.

"Oh, a long time ago," replied Looney, sort of hesitatingly, and looking around the crowd for help.

Sampson was a good man, and a big husky feller, too. So was Joseph, and George Washington, and Thomas Jefferson, and Henry Clay, and Grant, and Abe Lincoln, and Solomon, and David, and Bunker Hill, and Adam, and Moses, and Elijah, and Elisha—oh if there ever was a bally good fellow it was Elisha. He could perform miracles—

"But how about those poor little children that the she bears tote up after Elisha cursed them?" inquired Professor Dadd. "I think there were 42 of them. And Elisha seemed to enjoy their torture and death hugely—

"Durn 'em they deserved all they got!" exclaimed Mr. Doffer. "They made fun of Elisha's bald head, durn 'em! They was sassy brats, the hull dun gang of 'em, and Elisha was justified in havin' in the bears eat 'em alive!"

Dunkleheimer had gotten up from the bench and was getting a paper of tacks from a shelf just over Looney Doffer's head, and when that gentleman had finished his defense of Elisha the cobbler lifted Doffer's hat up and allowed his balditude to grin out at us like the evil spirits of famine grinning at the peasantries of Russia, and the cobbler laughingly remarked:

"Dot balditude beezness was a tender spot mit Looney, and consequently he was in sympathetic longitudinal similitude mit Elisha and his she bears, consequently. Baldheaded men of one feder generally flock togidder der front seat of dot pink stocking-legged show, fur instinct, which was likewise some spots including." He playfully patted Doffer on his wide expanse of baldness and continued:

"Looney you should buy soon of those reversible pants dot was double-breasted mit two decks, dose you could wear dem oop side down when you took your hat off mit spontaneous hetty-kett," accordidly."

Looney snatched his hat out of the cobbler's and pulled it so far down over his ears that those innocent organs lapped down like the leaves of a club-rooted cabbage stalk, and flounced out of the shop with the angry vim of a defeated candidate going home to scold his wife and discharge the hired man.

"That's the way it goes!" exclaimed Professor Dadd: "When you touch an honest person's tender spot he goes off mad. They haven't practiced hypocrisy long enough to hide their anger. Successful men have made a study of how not to whine when their tender spot is touched. They are like the old veteran who practiced several years how to grin and bear it while thrusting a needle into his leg. When he got so accustomed to it that he could thrust the long needle in to the bone without the least sign of a wince or a contortion of pain, he began to doctor for paralysis, previous to applying for increase of pension. He insisted that his liver limbs were paralyzed, and his home physician prodded him in the place his wife suggested, and he never winc'd or changed color.

"But when they took him before the Pension board the inquisitive doctors stripped him naked and gave him a thorough examination, and when it came to the needle test the doctor made preparations to prod him in the spot indicated by the helpless patient, and the old soldier was bracing himself for the shock, when another internally mean doctor prodded the victim's other leg with the point of a red-hot prographic needle. He touched a tender spot unawares, and the yell that spouted out of that old soldier loosened the screws in the door latch; and, in his struggles, he lifted the other leg—the trained leg, and accidentally touched that infernal red-hot needle, and a fresher and louder yell escaped from his hypocrisy, and also from his vocal box. And the spilling those playful doctors gave him with their open hands cured him so completly in about two minutes that he went home on foot, while his two friends took turns in carrying the stretcher over their shoulders until they got outside of town, when they threw it into the river, and ran on to overtake the paralytic soldier who had been so miraculously cured, but who was still as mad as the very devil."

"Well," said Careadem Hooter, "there is a tender spot on the average man's pollyties, too. He will jine in with you in condemning the Trusts and the system of graft and political rottenness, and swear and cuss louder than you ever did; but when you intermate that the Trusts have all grown up durin' the last 50 years, and that the Republickin party has bin in power all that time, except the eight years of Cleveland, that man will fly up and call you a goat—"

"Und you was a goat, to, by dam it!" exclaimed the cobbler. "Now you has touched a raw shpeck on Dunkleheimer, and in accordance! You kin not blame all our political nastiness on der Re-pooplikin party. She kin not hellep it. Dhem Trusts growed on dot party like som cancers on a men's faces. At first she expected it was a moskeeter bites, or a phidder bites, and she scratched it mit vociferous raspiration, and tickled it mit der finger of kindness accordingly, and purdy, soon dot cancer was bigger ass der face-waloo of dot party.

"Und dot Trusht cancer et und et until she et der whole face away. She et der eyes ous, and der nose off, and ears off. Und when Clover Grieveland was der president she was alright. Und all dot time dot Trusht cancer et und et away, und et der eyes ous, and ears off, and nose off from our poopic officials mit exasperating promptitude, and now nobodies holding poopic office can see or hear or smell what was going on, because his face-waloo was, et away and he was a choom."

"But the Trusts are not only eating up our public officials—they are eating up everybody!" exclaimed Professor Dadd. "And what shall we do with them? What is the cure?"

"Dot was not my tender shpeck Meester Datt. I was already et. I has been et oop long ago. You see, while our poopic officials was tickling dot Trushts under der chin and calling it a moskeeter bites, dot Trushts was tickling me under der chin and calling me soon tid-bit bites, accordingly; and before I known anydings mit amphibious grottoitude I was shwollored down wholesale and my tender spot went head foremost mit exasperating longitudinal imbecility, including!"

"Hush," whispered Joel Jig-gerboll; "here comes Mrs. Wart-noggle and we will hear all about the shortcomings of her husband. I can tell by the tilt of her nose that sh's mad."

"But, mind you, warned Professor Dadd, if any of you join in and help her abuse old Wartnoggle you will touch a tender spot in the old woman, and she will roast you good and plenty. It is one of the peculiarities of human nature. We aulpe our friends when we feel like it, but if a stranger tries to help us along with our abuse we turn on him and roast him for his pains and—"

"Goot morgan, Meeses Wart-noggle," was the cobbler's cheerful greeting, as that lantern-jawed lady flounced into the shop. "Dot down—excuse der company I was keeping—what kin I do fur you?"

"I just wanted to see how much our bill is, and, mebby, get a pair of new shoes, if you'll trust me. Indeed, I couldn't blame you if you refused to give me credit, for that man, Ezry Wartnoggle, is doin' wuss and wuss every year."

Along with his laziness and idleness and general worthlessness, he's got to drinkin' wuss and wuss every year. His word isn't worth' any more than his note, and all the property he's got that hasn't got a mortgage on it, that ole mule and cart, and they are both too old to eat hay. If it wasn't for the disgrace I'd git a divorce from the old reprobate and leave him to shift for himself."

"Last week he struck me. He came home drunker'n biled owl, and wanted me to pull off his boots and put him to bed. He said he was Mary's little lamb, and had to git up early in the mornin' to be the queen of May; and when I pulled his nose to wake him out of his delirium he hauled off and smote me on the jaw and called me an old cat, and then sat on me till I hollered murder."

"He was a soon-of-a gun!" exclaimed the excited cobbler. "Und you was a goat, to, by dam it!" exclaimed the cobbler. "Now you has touched a raw shpeck on Dunkleheimer, and in accordance! You kin not blame all claimed the excited cobbler. "He should be in chail. A men like dot would shteal sheep and rob a graveyard, accordingly. Der dirty dog. Der low down nigger shackass, what he iss! Der dam—"

He was stopped at this point very abruptly. He had hit the woman's tender spot and she resented the insult to her family by swatting the cobbler over the head with her umbrella. Dunkleheimer looked at her in a dazed way and blinked very fast and ejaculated: "Hell! Was dot you?"

FARAWAY MOSES.

A Creeping Death.

Blood poison creeps up towards the heart, causing death. J. E. Stearns, Belle Plaine, Minn., writes that a friend dreadfully injured his hand, which became so blood poison. Dunkleheimer Salvie drove out the poison, healed the wound, and saved his life. Best in the world for burns and sores. 25c at T. E. Paull's drug store.

What Women Are Doing.

It is a sign of the times that in many women's organizations the establishment of classes in cookery, sewing, hygiene, and sanitation in the home are being freely discussed and earnestly advocated. The evils of ignorance of such matters are so apparent and so appalling to the twentieth century woman, and the almost impossibility of securing, even at high cost, efficient service along these lines, which are so necessary to the maintenance of the home life so pressing, that the question has become a problem which engages our very best minds. Whatever the croakers may say about club membership spoiling the home, time will soon show that the organization of women into deliberate bodies for the discussion of the questions of the day are most important movements, prolific of untold good to the isolated sisters who are too burdened or too tired to think out ways and means for themselves, and too weak in influence to push them as individuals. These club women may make mistakes—even our national rulers do that, you know; but their powers are developing in the right direction, and the various organizations are settling down to a "business" basic born of experience and earnest thought.

Because, as the plaintiff alleges, her husband has not bathed for 22 years, and brags of the fact, Mrs. Phoebe Nauman, wife of a farmer of Marshalltown, Ia., filed a petition for divorce. She asks $8,000 in alimony and should get every cent of it.

Alfalfa in Kentucky

HUBERT VREELAND,
JOSEPH E. WING.

During the recent tour through Kentucky of the Alfalfa and Corn Special, conducted by the Department of Agriculture, there was distributed from the train several thousand pamphlets devoted to alfalfa culture in Kentucky. As this subject is attracting such general attention in the State we want to give as general publicity as possible to the teachings of this pamphlet. The pamphlet is too long to publish in one issue of the ADAIR COUNTY NEWS, but we will publish installments from it each week till the entire pamphlet is published. We suggest that those of our readers who failed to obtain copies of the pamphlet preserve the issues of the Farmers Home Journal so they can study the alfalfa question thoroughly and at their leisure.

The body of the pamphlet was prepared by Joseph E. Wing, of Ohio. The following introduction was prepared by Hubert Vreeland, Commissioner of Agriculture:

In presenting this booklet to the farmers of Kentucky we deem it but proper that the Commissioner outline that views of the Department of Agriculture, Labor and Statistics regarding the introduction of alfalfa into the State.

Let it be thoroughly understood in the beginning that this department does not advocate a wholesale sowing of alfalfa until the farmers have made a thorough study of their lands and are reasonably certain that their soil is adapted to the growth of this wonderful forage plant. We are of the opinion that the impression which had gained foothold in the State that alfalfa could not be grown here was due to the failure of a few men to get a stand who sowed some of the seed a few years ago without regard to soil conditions and without having studied the nature of the plant. This bureau does not claim to be infallible in its opinion that alfalfa will prove a boon to the farmers of Kentucky. When human methods must be employed, we realize that there is an element of chance in every undertaking in life. But realizing our responsibility, we have not gone into the matter blindly.

When the present Commissioner was entrusted with the responsibilities of this important department of the State government he realized that it was his duty to get out of the beaten paths and to devise, as far as it lay in his power, ways and means by which the agricultural and live stock interests of the State would be advanced. Appreciating the fact that the word "agriculture" covered such a broad scope that no man can reasonably claim to be an expert in all the various phases of farming, he deemed it expedient that he should put himself in touch with men who have given special crops years of undivided study and to adopt the best and most practical ideas presented. Chief among these were Joseph E. Wing, of Mechanicsburg, Ohio, and Prof. J. N. Harper, then Agriculturist at the Kentucky Experiment Station. The Commissioner of Agriculture went over considerable of the State's territory with these gentlemen, and after noting the conditions carefully, it was unanimously agreed that alfalfa can be grown in many parts of the State, the one thing needful being the dissemination of the proper information. There were already a few thrifty plots in various parts of the State and the State Department of Agriculture sent out some seed for experimental purposes with the result that a number of good stands were secured. The subject of alfalfa culture was discussed at all the farmers' institutes held under the auspices of this bureau. The farmers generally became enthused and the last report of this bureau shows that there are now 3,700 acres of alfalfa in this State as against less than two hundred acres two years ago. This encouraged the department to such an extent that after consulting with Mr. Wing, who is recognized as one of the best alfalfa experts in the United States, and Prof. Harper, who has experimented with the plant for a number of years, it was decided to run a special train over the State giving lectures and disseminating literature especially prepared for the project. This met with the hearty approval of the Advisory Board of the State Department of Agriculture as well as the various farmers' clubs. The Bureau of Agriculture was fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Wing as the principal lecturer on alfalfa.

It might be interesting to the farmers of the State to know that there is now a field of one hundred acres within less than a mile of Frankfort. A sample from this field measuring five and one-half feet in length is now in the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture. There is another field of thirty acres a few miles from Frankfort.

In a letter from Mr. W. T. Kane, Fallsburg, Lawrence county, Ky., the writer reports that his alfalfa is in a good, thrifty condition, and says that his third cutting yielded him 4,240 pounds per acre. "The 'yaller' dirt in which it grew," he continues, "is over 1,100 feet above the sea level and is exactly where the U. S. Geological Survey made a station, 'Kane Knob,' from which, with the aid of glass, hill tops can be seen fifty miles distant."

There are also small plots in Clay and Knox counties and the alfalfa is reported in good condition. In Warren, Henry, Christian, Pendleton, Nelson, Fayette and a large number of other counties alfalfa is being grown with success. Mr. J. J. Botto, of Boston, Nelson county, has grown alfalfa for ten years with a marked degree of success, while Prof. Harper secured three tons per acre from the first cutting from the Experiment Station plot this spring.

We would particularly urge the farmers to be careful in the selection of their seed. But with good seed, true to germination, a good, deep soil with plenty of humus and with the proper attention the first year, the farmers should be able to at least raise alfalfa in sufficient quantity for home consumption.

In addition to the lectures on the culture of alfalfa, the services of Prof. P. G. Holden, of Ames, Iowa, were secured for the special. Prof. Holden has made a specialty of seed corn selection and the cultivation of the cereal with the result that last year he increased the corn crop of Iowa 10,000,000 bushels. He made known his methods by means of a special train which he ran over his State making stops of thirty minutes.

With plenty of corn and good crops of alfalfa, we are of the opinion that Kentucky will eventually take up her former rank among the stock-feeding States of the nation.

HATCHER.

Robt., son of the late Judge Caldwell, is critically ill at his home and his host of friends entertain but little hope of his recovery, unless relief comes soon. The physicians do not agree, but indications point to appendicitis.

A literary club was organized at Meadow creek last Friday evening and Mr. R. H. Turner was elected President. The first subject for public debate is, Resolved, "That city life is more productive of ignorance and crime than country life." The exercises will be varied and much interest is already manifested.

Mrs. Eliza Sreeve, formerly of this county, died at her home in Greensburg on the 13th inst. She was a consistent member of the Bethel church, at which place her remains were interred. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. M. Chumley.

D. S. Wade is seriously ill with fever.

J. F. Campbell bought a mule colt from Mrs. Maggie Turner for $45.

Henry Anderson, colored, had one of his cattle butchered a few days ago by some unknown person.

Burglars made two raids upon the store and post office at this place last week. Several small articles and a few cents was the booty taken. A repetition of the offence will probably find the contents of a load in the raider's anatomy, as guard is being kept.

Most of our farmers are done sowing wheat. There seems to be a larger acreage than usual. Better seed and fertilizer were used and some of the farmers are experimenting with a few acres. They are making efforts to get a yield of 50 bushels per acre.

Rev. C. M. Chumley has accepted a call to the Bethel and Campbellsville churches. He is attending Synod in Louisville this week. No pastor, of so short an acquaintance, has endeared himself to the people as Bro. Chumley.

Achrie Cowherd, of this place, had a bicycle stolen from him a few nights ago, by a stranger that claimed to live in Russell county. Mr. Cowherd made a trip to Russell and spotted the party. A warrant for his arrest is now in the hands of an officer

The political situation in Taylor is quiet. There are two tickets for city offices but, with the exception of Judge's race, no opposition in the county.

Mr. James Herron sold a lot of 1,300 pound steers to Durham Bros., at 4 cents. Trader are losing on stock engaged a few months ago.

Good calves are bringing five dollars per head and fat heifers 2 to 2½ cents.

Preach prosperity but no visible signs except through the Almighty, who has blessed us with abundant crops.

A sweet potato is on exhibition here that is of the crop of 1904 and 1905. The last year potato was planted and the new potato grew to it in Siamese twin fashion. Both potatoes will be planted next year and the party hopes to have a potato grown in three different years.

Mr. Walter Cox, of Mannsville, is very low with complication of diseases. He receives a pension of $48 a month and is a liberal hearted man but does not profess to be a Christian.

John T. Newton has resigned as Jailer of Taylor county and W. T. Berkley was appointed in his stead. Mr. Berkley is the Democratic nominee and will be his own successor.

A CARD.

FELLOW CITIZENS:

The requisite number of my friends have petitioned and had my name placed upon the official ballot as the Democratic nominee for County Judge of Adair county. I take this method of announcing my candidacy for said office, and respectfully solicit your votes. I did not seek this office, but since my friends, of all political parties, have solicited me to become a candidate, I willingly acquiesce, and would thank you for your votes.

If honored with election I promise a faithful discharge of the duties of the office. While I am in line with the progressive spirit of the age, I think that greater economy should be practiced in the financial affairs of the county.

That our taxes are too high most people will concede, and if elected it would be my pleasure to zealously guard the interests of the county in regard to its financial affairs. If elected I would try to administer justice between citizens, without discrimination.

It will be impossible for me to see all the voters, but I am known over the county, and if the people can confide in me sufficiently to make me County Judge, I hope their confidence will not be misplaced.

Respectfully,

W. F. NEAT.

FREE TRAINING OF NURSES.

By the terms of a fund to be administered in connection with the Philadelphia School of Nurses, Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, a number of young women from every county will receive free training in nursing. It is planned to ultimately reach and help in this way every village in the State. The young women will be provided with room, board, nurse uniforms and all the refinements of a well-appointed Christian home. At graduation the diploma of the School and the Order of the Red Cross will be conferred, qualifying for practice in any state or country. The railroad fare will then be paid back home. Those applying and chosen to receive the benefits of this fund will be given two years training, with a rich experience in nursing the sick poor of the city under skilled leaders. The term of training will be eighteen months by half-time preliminary course of six months' reading and study at a special short course enables young women to quickly qualify themselves for self-support and a substantial income. In addition to regular nursing, the young women are taught to preserve their own health; how to recognize, avoid and destroy contagion; how to establish and maintain perfect sanitary conditions about the home; they are prepared for positions as office nurse and physician's assistant; they Russia is experiencing much trouble with railroad strikes and the situation is alarming.

The men on the Democratic ticket, if elected, will take care of the interests of Adair county in the good old way.

Read Hon. W. F. Neat's statement on 3rd page and then act on your judgment as to the best interest of Adair county.

The editor of The Spectator evidently overstated that which he really did not mean, or else state in last week's paper, or else there are many sellers in his party.

The secret ballot system is being defended by the dark lantern process. Nearly every voter has received an earnest appeal through a circular letter headed, "The secret ballot in danger," and signed, "Committee on secret ballot." No person's name is signed to the letter—no one game enough to stand pat. Such a way of meeting a great proposition, to say the best of it, is cowardly. The secret ballot may be best, some think so, and if a man so believes he ought to speak out and not take methods of presenting argument in favor of it and conceal his identity. It is more than likely that the above circular letter would lose all of its force if its origin were known.

We have never believed in the secret ballot and the secret method of conducting elections. There are many of the same opinion, but if otherwise, would not seek such methods of defending the secret system as the party or parties couched behind the movement to retain it.

It has been charged and generally believed, that Thomas Jefferson was an infidel, and decidedly skeptical, but such an opinion can not be entertained by reading the so-called Jefferson Bible. Recently Mr. M. Rey Yarberry loaned us a copy of that book and it is just to the opposite of infidelity. It is titled Morals of Jesus, and is purely a compilation of all that Jesus did and said as recorded in Mathew, Mark, Luke and John, in Greek, Latin, French and English, and shows the great theme of love which seems to have inspired and actuated Mr. Jefferson in his life's work. The Jefferson Bible is now the property of the United States. Was purchased this year and may be seen in the National Museum at Washington

The argument in favor of retaining the secret ballot system is overcome by the undisputable facts known to every voter in this state, that there has been more frauds, more contests, more heat, partisan fights and more buying and selling of votes since it was inaugurated than occurred within the State for a hundred years before. The fight in Louisville seems to be over ballots.

Both sides are claiming that gigantic frauds will be committed in the coming election, that plans for ballot-box stuffing and ballot stealing are being made. It would appear from the charges that one side are thieves and the other robbers, that after the voters have cast their ballots, results may be changed. Plank it down with pen and ink and do away with this stuffing business and contests and doubtful ballots and the stealing of honestly cast votes. If you favor the old honest system put your "X" in the square opposite the word "Yes."

The insinuations in last week's Spectator that the Democrats selected J. H. Young and J. A. Diddle to buy up Republicans was not made from facts, neither was it an appeal to the sober sense of the people, but a round-the-corner way of arousing partisan feeling and pitching the present campaign on party lines. There has been no caucus and no prearranged plans for such a movement and our candidates have been selected with better judgment and higher ideals. They are men suited for the positions they seek, and no fair minded man in this county will say otherwise. They are all personally popular, full of energy and responsible. It is this kind of men who should be put in positions of honor and trust whether of our party or the other. The truckling to political prejudice, the strict adherence to party nominees regardless of the adaptability of the office seekers to the positions they must fill, has caused many counties to wag along under heavy taxes and little compensation.

Largely our ticket does not represent wealth and some of our candidates are men of moderate means, but regardless of money, it is composed of men as good as the party could select, and if elected each station will be well filled. The time has come when men should measure up to the requirements of the position they seek or else be defeated regardless of party affiliation. The Spectator should not seek to arouse party passions merely to gain political ends. It has never yet given reasons why its party should retain control in the affairs of this county but its feeble effort only has been to arouse political passion and line 'em up. Partisan prejudice rarely ever does anything except to lead a man wrong. It never overthrows corrupt methods; it never institutes a reform; it never blessed a country. Its bite is like an asp and its poison like an adder. It arrays neighbor against neighbor, friend against friend. It overthrows peace and good will and installs confusion, disorder and hatred. It saps the life of public spirit and brings ruin where prosperity and happiness should reign. The people of this country are acquainted with the men who are out for office and know the needs of the county.

The candidates are in the saddle.

No one can tell the result of the election or what horse will be the winner—it's largely a game of chance.

The interest in the election seems to be warming up. Mr. M. Rey Yarberry seems determined to have a hand in the scramble as he is telling the people the thing to do.

Gentlemen, it is your duty as good citizens to go to the election next Tuesday and cast your ballot in favor of the men you believe to be best suited for officials of this County. It is also your duty to vote for or against the constitutional amendment permitting a return to the Viva Voce system. Vote as you think best for the good of the State, but never. Stay-at-home voters never do any thing.

Below we give the latest from Russia which shows that while no blood has been shed, yet, a revolution is on and the Czar has surrendered to overwhelming public sentiment that demands freedom:

St. Petersburg, Oct. 30, 6:00 p.m.
To-night the autocracy of the Romanoffs and the old order of things cease to exist in Russia. Emperor Nicholas has surrendered, and Count Witte comes into power as Minister-President, with an imperial mandate which will enable him to convert the farcical National Assembly into a real legislative body, elected by greatly extended suffrage, and to control on the people fundamental civil liberties, including free speech.

These welcome tidings reached St. Petersburg shortly before 6 o'clock this evening. Count Witte had spent the day with the Emperor at Peterhoff going over the final draft of the manifesto, to which he insisted that certain minor modifications be made, and before taking the train for St. Petersburg he telephoned to a friend that the Emperor had affixed his signature and that the imperial seal was on the document on which he had agreed to accept office, was in his pocket. These include freedom of the press, the right of assembly, and the immunity of the person, including the right of habeas corpus.

The cool frosty nights and chilly autumn days call to mind the fact that the cricket has passed to realms of silence, the cricket is here no more and the Katy Did's music has been hushed. It is farewell to "The Good Old Summer Time" and a brace-up against the snows and blows.

Judge W. W. Jones recently purchased a two horse power Fairbanks, Morse, etc., engine with pump at tachometer and a small saw rig. This engine will displace the wind mill while the saw will be used for cutting wood. There are a number of farmers who could profitably use an outfit of this kind.

Col John B. Wathen's sale of high bred horses, at his farm near Lebanon was a great success. An unusually large crowd of buyers was present and the prices realized were satisfactory. The sale consisted mostly of the get of Norvin W., a horse that has proven his worth. Prices ranged from $110 to his worth. An average price being close to $100. The horses were a two year old, a yearling, and a yearling and a two year old, average price being close to $100. The entire sale amounted to a neat sum though all the stock did not sell, due to weather conditions which prevented rapid work.

Mr. Wathen's effort to advertise and push forward the stock interests of Marion County is meeting deserved success.

Mr. J. A. Young, of this city, celebrated his 45th birthday last Thursday. He was the recipient of quite a number of nice presents. Some of them coming from other States. A number of friends and relatives were present to help Mr. Young enjoy the dinner, which was as good as it was attractive.

Mr. George (Banta) Bryant, of Cragcraft, was in town Monday for the purpose of having a tooth extracted. He reports that it took two dentists to perform the work, that is, after one had exhausted his pulling powers, the other by a hard pull and a long pull brought the tooth. Dr. J. N. Murrell was the man who hung on till the tooth was loose.

The registration in Columbia, including the supplement day, last Monday, stands as follows: Democrats 94, Republicans 82, Prohibitionist 3, and Independent 14. It is readily seen that the vote is close between the two great political parties and that the Prohibition vote is yet in its infancy. The Independent vote given to the Republicans is a good sign that party in the lead and if given to the Democrats would make it the likely base. The fact is that the Independents hold the balance of power. Just think of what 14 of our citizens could do if they so decide.

We understand that Mr. J. D. Sharp, of Amandanville, is a candidate for Magistrate in his precinct in Cumberland county and it affords us pleasure to say that we believe he would make a good official, one who would do his duty to the county. Mr. Sharp is an old Adair county boy and a man every body likes. We hope that the people in his precinct will elect him. Mr. Sharp has served in this position before which will enable him to do more now than he could if green in the business.

The Knoxville Journal and Tribune give an extended notice of Mr. Woodruff's death, which died of heart failure in the New Willard hotel, Washington, D. C., on the 17th. Mrs. Woodruff's death was as unexpected as it was sad to her of friends in her home city, and the mention of her many graces in the above mentioned journals will bring back many a fond memory. The Journal says: "It was in her home where her virtues shone brightest and her sterling qualities were most keenly appreciated. There she was a living light, a loving counselor, a safe guide, a true and faithful help-mate to her husband and an affectionate mother." No greater epitaph could be written.

Little Ruby, the bright eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Baker, of Amandanville, died on the 30th, of typhoid fever. The death of a child of such tender years is a sad event. There she was a living light, a loving counselor, a safe guide, a true and faithful help-mate to her husband and an affectionate mother." No greater epitaph could be written.

Masters and Engineers.

In the eyes of all engineers of steamships the deck officers of their ships are profoundly ignorant. Here are some of the stories they tell.

A young mate went into the engine room with a message from the Captain to the engineer. The latter saw the other was interested and began to explain things to him. Being a civil and obliging man he made no attempt to tell fairy tales to the stranger, and moreover he kept as clear as possible of all puzzling technicalities. He pointed out the cylinders, the various rods, the eccentrics, the shaft, and so on, explaining roughly the uses of the various pumps and auxiliary machinery, and the mate was genuinely pleased and interested, and said so. Then when going upon deck again, a thought seemed to strike him. Halting on the ladder he called the engineer and explained his difficulty. Thanks, awfully, for showing me 'round, Mac. You've made the whole thing as plain as a pikestaff. But one thing I don't exactly grasp. What are your boilers for? The engineer promptly replied: "Why to keep the firemen from wearying you idiot!"

A burly, thick-headed skipper had been given the command of a little steam collier. Going up with great pride onto the bridge of his new ship, the first thing that caught his eye was the engine-room telegraph.

"What's that for?" She demanded.

"Why, that goes down to the engine room," was the reply. "You see all the orders on it. 'Full speed,' 'Half,' 'Slow,' 'Stop.' You just have to move the handle."

The old man was charmed. "If Aa put the handle to Stop will she stop ganging?"

"Certainly."

The old man was still more charmed. Finally, after thinking some time, he heaved a sigh of pleasure.

"Why, that's fine, man! That's clever! That does away with all them saucy devils o' engineers!"

Eggs in Winter.

I think there are many factors that enter into the production of eggs in Winter, any one of which if lacking, is apt to lesson the yield. In the first place we must have fowls that are at laying maturity when Winter comes; pullets that have reached their full size and hens that are in condition to lay all through mounting and not too fat.

I have found very little difference in Winter laying qualities of Plymouth Rocks, Langshans and Leghorns under conditions favorable to each breed. Leghorns will produce eggs at a less food cost, but require better house conditions and must not be allowed to run out in the cold and wet. The hens or pullets must be from a laying strain and every detail of housing, feeding and care well looked to in order to secure Winter eggs.

I shall not discuss methods of feeding, as this subject has been fully treated, but in order to bring hens to laying in Winter requires considerable care. Yet proper feeding is not the whole thing. Other requirements must be met or the best food in the world will not make hens lay. The neglect of seemingly unimportant matters will often greatly lessen, and sometimes completely check, laying.

If hens are not protected they will burn the food up to keep warm, will not exercise as much as is necessary, consequently will not lay. They must be protected from cold winds; have plenty of fresh air and sunshine, dry, clean, quarters and scratching material with which to keep themselves busy. A bundle of straw for them to scratch in brings as good returns for its cost as the same amount of money expended in a different way. Exercise converts the carbon in the food into heat, and thus it is utilized, leaving the material from which the egg is formed; while without exercise in cold weather, much more food—in fact more than the hen can eat—is required to keep up the heat of the body and make an egg; hence the hen does not lay. Water is necessary as over sixty per cent. of an egg is water, so the hen must have an abundant supply, and it should not be allowed to freeze. Cor., Rural World.

Judge J. P. Hobson, of the Court of Appeals, who will be a candidate for re-election, can go before his people with an enviable record on the bench of our highest court. He is a tireless and indefatigable worker and the records of the court show that he has written more decisions than any of the Judges, many of them in the most important cases. Those who know say he works with a rapidity and precision rarely equalled, and that he carries into his work a breadth of legal learning that makes his opinions forcibly expressed and convincing. Judging by the newspapers in Judge Hobson's district there is a unanimity for his re-election that insures no opposition to him within the Democratic party, and when he receives his party's nomination there will be little chance of Republican opposition of a nature to imperil his success. —Kentucky State Journal.

Saved by Dynamite.

Sometimes a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray, of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her; so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Cough and Colds, which easily cured her." Strictly scientific cure for bronchitis and laryrge. At T. E. Paul's drug store, price 50¢ and $1.00, guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

On a considerable portion of the farms of New England it will be found the better way to do as much of the plowing in autumn as circumstances will permit. The weather is usually suitable, the teams in good condition and the farmer can take time to do the work in the best manner without being in a hurry.

Where the plowing is properly done, there should be no need for repeating the operation in the spring. Fall plowing allows of the seedling being done considerably earlier in the Spring, and that is usually of much importance.

Good plowing is, of the first consideration in the profitable production of crops. It is really the foundation on which the owner's work is to be done, hence the necessity for doing it well.

"She has more tact.

"She has more fluency in the lower forms of speech."

Detailed for Baptism.

During the Civil War, the late Colonel Gabe Boucch organized a regiment, which he controlled as a dictator. It was while the army was resting after Colonel Gabe's first campaign that an itinerant evangelist wandered into camp and, approaching the colonel asked if he was the commanding officer.

"Ugh!" snorted "Old Gabe," as he was affectionately called, "what do you want?"

"I am an humble servant of the Lord endeavoring to save the souls of the unfortunate. I have just left the camp of the —th Massachusetts, where I was instrumental in leading eight men into the paths of righteousness.

"Adjutant!" thundered Colonel Boucch, after a moment's pause, "detail ten men for baptism. No Massachusetts regiment shall beat men for piety."
